This similarity is in itself a very significant circumstance, as at least shows conclusively that those in Hongkong who regarded the question of employing Chinese to a large extent in the Police Force, as involving many and grave considerations, were not so alarmist or so fariciful in their views as it suited those "donting other ideas to represent. The Commission at Singapore are fully alive to the extent to which a large body of Chinese Police would be liable to work into the hands · of the Secret Societies and Koongsees, and the small amount of reliance which could in consequence be placed upon them. This is the point which has always been urged in these columns, and it is some confirmation of their correctness that the Committee in Singapore, who are able to judge from practical experience, adopt the same or very

He points to the success which has attended this plan in Java, as an argument in favour of its adoption in Singapore, but curiously overlooks the essential element which makes it work satisfactorily in the Dutch Colonies. There they adopt the Chinese system entirely, making the Companies heavily responsible for any disorders that may arise. With such pressure as this upon the Headmen, a Chinese system might work to a certain extent, but to set such a system on foot would be to give up the government of the larger portion of the inhabitants in this Colony to an extent named Chun-a-kong, with shatching a bundle line would charge for a touth. which would hardly be accepted by the Enghish Government as in accordance with its dignity; and which in Hongkong, where we are in such close proximity to the mainland, would be fraught with danger, as being likely | She gave chase, as also did her busband, and her to cause the whole Chinese population to be | husband, who ran faster than she did, caught | at any given moment under the complete the bundle was tost. nfluence of the Chinese authorities.

Another argument which was used in · favour of an addition to the Chinese members of the force, was that it would be possible to bring the secret organisations under control and then there would be no danger of their influencing the Chinese policemen,

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BEFORE F. W. MITCHELL, Esq.

AN HONEST NEIGHBOUE. An old widow woman, named Mok-a-sow. charged an old man named Lee-a-loy, as fol-

Complainant said at 9 a.m. on the 1st July she went to cut grass, and on her return at 11 o'clock she found her hut door open, one jacket was taken and also an unfinished jacket; the lock of the door was broken. From enquiry to do otherwise than doubt very gravely the she found the defendant was in custody, having been apprehended by a Chinese lukong, while taking the things to pawn. The defendant lived next door. The things produced belonged | thought he did.

> BEFORE THE HON. C. MAY. ALLEGED ASSAULT.

Tung-a-suey, a manager and fee receiver a the Eastern slaughter-house, summoned a conlie named Hong-n-ty, of the Kwong-tai porkstall, in the Central-market, for assaulting him on the 29th ulto, with a bamboo, and knocking out one of his front teeth.

Mr. Wotton appeared for the defendant, and Mr. Stephens appeared for the prosecution. Mr. Stephens said the case stood thus: The defendant on the 29th ultimo, brought two pigs to the East Point slaughter-house, and it is the custom of the place to charge 20 or 30 cents for killing pigs below 100 catties, and 40 cents threw his pigs in the balances, and then jerked them out again, in doing so broke the hook and string off the balance, and wanted to make out they were less than 100 catties. The complainant rebuked him, and wanted to weigh again and to put another string on. The defendant got not seen the man who was hurt, and never heard angry, struck the complainant on the mouth and knocked one of his teeth out, and then eried out to the butchers on the premises to "Tah.

tah." There has been disturbances by defendant since in consequence, he wishing to go down and heat complainant. Complainant, Tang-a-sucy, declared, stated on the afternoon of the 29th ultimo defendant of the Kwong-tai pork-stalk Central-markets brought two pigs to the East Point slanghterhouse. He himself was the manager there. and it is a rule that if a pig weighs under 100 cutties the charge is 20 cents, and if over 100 catties 40 cents. The defendant twisted the balance burriedly to get the pig out of the balance, so us to make out less than 10 J catties. he believed, and broke the string of the balance. He put othe balance right again, but the defendant got augry, and struck him with a bamboo in the mouth. knocked the tooth out (tooth produced). The lefendant then ran into the compound, and oried out "Tab, tah." Some of the butchers wanted to show fight, but they were quieted by a peacemaker on the establishment. The defendant also struck him on the hand with a bamboo. He weighed the pig, and found weighed 120 catties, and defendant refused to pay more than 20 cents, but he had to pay 40. After he was assaulted, he ran into the compradore's room for protection. He believed defendant got angry because he wanted to weigh the pig again. In answer to Mr. Wotton, witness said he has seen the defendant at the slaughter-house often; he believes the defendant capsized the scales so as to make out the pig of less weight. He went to the Station for the police, and found the defendant had run away; it was then he weighed the pig. He has only one pair of bulances on the premises. The defendant struck him on the thumb with a bamboo, and made the mark showed : never asw the defendant struck.

Kon-a-kum, employed at the Eastern shoughter-house, said on the 29th instant the defendant brought two pigs to the slaughterhouse. He saw him place them on the balance. and by a twist the balance sting broke. The defendant then wanted to put the pigs in the randum, which, in its preamble, declared add little to the preface, if it was not too long pen, and complainant prevented him the then that it was the opinion of the majority that for the members of Council to peruse. > In answer to Mr. Wotton, witness said the complainant ran away, but the defendant did Mr. Wotton, in summing up, said the defendant took two pigs to the slaughter-bouse in the usual way, and put them on the balance, and in some way the string broke, when he was abused, and was struck by some one, but seeing the odds were against bim, he ran, and a witness saw the complainant fall, then saw his month bleed, when the whole of the parties in the slaughter-house chased him. It was the defendant who should have summoned the complainant, and his client wanted him to take out a cross-summons, but he advised him not to as his Worship would see that it was not likely the slaughter-house people would turn on their own people. The reverse is the case, because the slaughter-house people turned on him. and he had to run away, and his Worship would see that damages would fall to the let of the defendant.

Mr. May suggested that defendant should make his own statement, defendant did so, and gave a similar statement to his attorney. -Mr. Wotton said that defendant pave no provocation for the assault, and ing client nover struck himself, ran away so as not to receive any more blows from the crowd who chased Chang-a-sew, declared, said be is a butcher at the Central-market. On the 29th ultimo we went to the Eastern slaughter-house with some pigs, and just as he was neuring the buildings he saw the defendant being chased out of the slaughter-house. He saw the complainant rushing out of the door, and as he aid so, saw him fall down; he then saw him bleed-Mr. May said that in a fall there would be grazes on the lips, and asked Inspector Livingston whether there were anv. Inspector Livingston said no, and if he had fallen there would be marks on the rose. Mr. Stephons said he could produce a witness who could prove there was no fall. Mr. Wotton said this witness, who had been listening to all that was said, he had no doubt would find out he knew more than he

No one blow. Two or three Chinese were quarrelling acquainted with the Chancellor's practical with some Malays. He was not quarrelling character can suppose he made up his mind to las with 12,000 troops has bemmed in the Carhimself. The defendant stuck him because he defy the Church of Rome, and to expose the would not let him strike the pig. He did not new German Empire to its anothemas and machinations, merely in order to test a favourite theory as to the proper relations of Church and State. "I have been too long associated with practical politics," he said, "to have much to do with speculative politics" (Konjectural politik) The measures regulating the training and anpointments of the clergy and the discipline the Ohnrokes which the Prussian Upper House is now reluctantly passing into law, were dictated by a necessity there was no combating or avoiding. One of the heatile critics of the Bills drew the inference from the suddenness of the change in the attitude of the Prussian Gorerument towards the Roman Uatholic Church ] that it had been long planned beforehand. The Chancellor declared that conclusion wholly groundless. The Government was desirous of maintaining "confessional peace." It was driven to another course by the attitude of the Church. The change is to be explained solely by the rinciple of self-defence." Prince Bismarck appealed to his past career and previous treatment of religious questions in proof of the fact that he had gone "to the farthest limit of conciliation that was possible for the State." Only when he was forced to see that " by the activity not of the Catholic Church, but of the party within that Church, which aimed at the temporal supremacy of the priests, a policy was promoted which threatened the foundations of our State.' did he conclude that "as Minister he could not bear the responsibility of further delay" in action. Up till the year 1871, till the formation of the Centre party and the systematic employment in all Germany of a hostile press, "till the creation of a Polish party in Silesia, till the misuse of the authority of the Church in furtherance of Polish national designs, with the co-operation of the priests," the attitude of the Government-by the admission of the Catholic spokesmen themselves—was friendly and conciliatory. The Chancellor appealed to the "socalled diary of the French Government during the time of the war and the siege" in disproof of all the statements as to Prussia's friendliness with Italy against the Pope. The relations with Italy, on the coutrary, during the French war were, as had been before stated, far from pleasant, owing to the Garibaldi incident. genesis" of his conviction that it was necessary in order to the self-defence of the State, endangered by the political action of the bierarchical party, to take arms against the Church of Rome was, therefore, of very recent date. And it was the action of that party, not its acceptance of any more doctrines or theories. which drove him to this conclusion. The fact that Prince Bismarck, after so long trying to live at peace with Rome, should have been impelled by practical circumstances to throw down the gauntlet, and defy it to mortal combat, is a fact of serious significance in determining our judgment regarding Rome. It shows how difficult—to the verge of impossible lity-it has become for any State which is not prepared to sucrifice its independence to devise a satisfactory modus vivendi with the Church of Rome. It shows that it is becoming more and more hard for a Government which respects? itself and knows its responsibilities to tolerate the conspiracies and machinations of the Ro man priesthood. And the fact that this is so opens up a vista of the future, and of the relaions of Church and State in it, which it would be absurd if it were possible to ignore. Before leaving the " historical track" we may as wel correct one mistake which has got into print It is not the case that Prince Bismark, after failing to get the support of Rome for the new Empire, turned to the Liberals " and declared that if he could not find help from the Couservatives, he must find it with their foes." There is no evidence that he made "the efforts" to secure "the strong support of Rome" in this sense. He was anxious not to break with Rome and only determined on doing so because - as we have shown and he has bimself suid-he found the Roman hierarchy and the emissaries of the Curia plotting against the Empire But, all the same, it was the agents of Rome who, after the Versailles peace, applied to the German Government for the same privileges in the new Empire as the Roman Church enjoyed in Prussia under the Constitution which has been lately revised. They were unsuccessful, because Prince Bismarck found the party of the Centre and other instruments of Home were, in accordance with the principles and new constitution of their Church, scheming against the Empire, endeavonring to erect an imperium in imperio, and exalting the authority of the Uhurch above the Emperor. The Chancellor's relations with the Conservatives have been quite misapprehended. In the last of the three speeches he deli vered he declared it was a mistike to say he had separated from the Conservative party "Between the Conservative party in its full extent and myself I believe there is now the most perfect barmony, and I at least am resolved to maintain that relation." He had not separated from the Conservative party, but "a section which once belonged to the great Conservative party bas; under the guidance eloquent and influential leaders, split from the Conservative party, and to my regret has come into conflict with the Government at a decisive crisis." No doubt he has accepted the aid-of the Liberals gladly; but, as he made plain in an earlier speech, he regards the Government. whose policy he inspires though he is no longer its nominal chief, as exclusively bound to no party, but in the position of being prepared to rely upon one or the other or both according to

The accusation that the faberals have changtheir principles in supporting the anticlerical hills of Dr. Falk is not to be heard in England alone. It was uttered in the Prussian Herrenhaus-as before in the Chamber of Denuties-by speakers whose Liberalism is of a curious complexion. It was freely urged in the former Chamber, and was met by Dr. Falk, not from a party, but from a goneral point of view. Circumstances have proved there and Companies. elsewhere that the State cannot, if it would, ter is bound to grant freedom to the former. As much as possible it will seek to realize " free State." But the freedom assured to the Church cannot be absolute. It can only be permitted to extend us far as is consistent with the existence and independence of the State. This is the broad principle which has been accepted by German Liberals and by a large number of German Conservatives as well. And Rome has practically demonstrated to Prince Bismarck and his collengues that no modus vivendi with that Church on the old footing is possible, that they have been driven to regulate the relations between Church and State snew.

HOW NOT TO DO IT" AT CALCUTTA. (Indian Daily News, May 26th.) The Times of India says :- " How not to do it' is an art in which the War Department (amongst others) is proficient. The latest instance comes to our knowledge from Aden. During the late Franco Prussian war a number of 300 pounder guns were sent out for the fortifications there at an enormous expense, but they have not yet been mounted because there are no racers for them. The fact needs no comment; he who runs may rend the lesson it teaches. Its parallel may be found in the monitors without crews, which are supposed to dofend Bombay from enemies by sea." The above cases cited by our contemporary are by no means isolated ones. Some few years ago, Onleutta was visited by an American frigate, which anchored or moored opposite Fort William. This fact very much alarmed certain people, who feared that an American fleet or a Russian war steamer night run up the river some night and demolish the fort. Well, this might possibly be done; but we should almost like to see any such vessels take a basty run up the Roogbly with such friendly intentions. The probability is that the "Muggraputtee Lumps," the "Rangafulla Sands," or the "James and Mary" shoul would make an end of the vessel long before she could come within gun shot of the fort. But to guard against the possibility of such a contingency as a visit from Commodore Smashem, of the U.S. navy, or of Admiral Popemoff, of the Russian fleet, it was resolved to construct a battery at Diamond Harbour, armed with some of those pocket pistols, whose very presence should say-" touch me not, if you have regard to your health." The works at Diamond Harbour were commenced; we dare not say that they are yet finished. The guns were brought to Calcutta to be in readiness to man the works at Diamond Harbour. They had to be carried round about to find a safe bridge to reach Fort William, where they have lain these years, waiting transmission to the Diamond Harbour battery. We fancy they are guns of the same style and calibre as thuse that were dropped for sale custody into the harbour of Bombay, or the same as thus "hich were sent to secure Aden against" H.M.S. Thetis during her passage from Suez the por the contingencies of the late war. It is, moreover, a fact that there is not even yet a carriage on which any of these guns could be placed, and it may be questioned whether there is yot in the country a model of a carriage on which these guns should be mounted. The guns are no doubt improving in Fort William, and, in a few more years, will be duly seasoned for use. The Russians may not yet contemplate a demonstration in the Bay of Bengal as a diversion from their operations in Central-Asia; but should they do so, it is consoling to think that the dangerous navigation of the Hooghly is not an unmitigated evil, as, regards the metroplis of India.

LIFE ASSURANCE AS AN INVEST

Let us compare the position of two men of thirty years of ago, one of whom invests £10 per annum in the ordinary way in some safe concern paying four per cent. per annum, compound interest, and the other a similar sum for a life assurance policy of £400, payable at death, in a good office, paying one and a half per cent. per annum as bonus on the policy and accudations and this he could do easily enough The risk of the company failing is certainly not so great as that of the investments depreciating. or vanishing altogether. Now, suppose both men live for thirty-two years and then die, the the position of their heirs will be just the same. -tuat is, one man's investments, with four per cent. compound interest will only equal the other man's policy with bonuses added, the sum in each case will be £626. Now, safe and profitable investments are difficult to find for small Bums for a lung term of years; and, when found, how many men are there who would rigidly adhere to the resolution to save the £10 every year, and never encrouch on the fund for sickness, holidays, increasing family, or other pressing emergencies? We think few could be so determined. On the other hand, the life premium becomes a sacred claim as a provision against early death. He knows he cannot withdraw without loss. True, this may be made to appear a drawback—the inability to get at the whole of the fund for any urgency -and it is an argument against excessive assurance; but looked at as a permanent investment, this very feature is a great advantage. The investor, then, has no advantage over the assurer until after thirty-two years of the experiment, and how many years of life can he The London & China Express, of May 23rd; expect-after an average age of sixty-two? Only two or three, for the average expectation We give a resumé of a Parliamentary Paper of life at the age of thirty is about thirty four which is about to be issued with reference to years, and only about half the men of thirty live to attain sixty-four. These two men of thirty have thus about an even chance of living to the age of sixty-two, when the comparison between them may be fairly said to begin; but in the event of death at any time before this age (also an even chance), there can be no comparison whatever. The assurer is, in the first year, in as good a position as the investor twenty years later, besides being freed, all the time from the first, from the care and anxiety which beset the saving man during the whole period. This is an item that cannot be computed in money, but it is vital one. What is one of the chick causes of premature death ? The narcissus, the wall-flower, and several others, appear to have furnished definite cases of this nature. Similar charges have been brought, he or less justly, against certain trees, shrubs, and even herbaceous plants, invisible commutions from which are reputed to cause nausea, insensibility, and even death, the famous fable of the Upar having a fractional amount of truthful realization. The Manchineel tree of the West Indies, and certain American species of Rhus are generally understood to be capable of thus vitiating and even poisoning the atmosphere that immediately envelopes them, though the effects are manifested only in persons who are predisposed to suffer from malaria. These statements rest, no doubt, upou a certain basis of fact, but more numerous observations, and greater precision determining how much is bond fide cause, and how much is veritable effect, are still needed in order to a right ap prehension of the degree to which plants can injure man seriously through his nostrila. Simple unpleasantness of odour is, of course, quite another thing, often a matter merely of fancy or education, and cannot be in any degree associated with deleterious qualities in the plant affording it, since we have noisome scents in some of the harmless labiatæ, such as the stuchys sylvatica and the ballota nigra, the very name of which last, facetiously derived from ballien, to "cast away," is intended to imply its unanimous rejection by respectable moses, or at events by the average nose of civilized Europe, while, per contra, there are plants of vicious properties that afford scent truly delicious-as, for example, the common mezereon. With modern science to give us lessons, we find, however, that the ill-effects produced by the odours of one set of plants and flowers are balanced, perhaps quite overmatched, by the good effects of other sets. Most of us have heard of "ozone." It is one of these capital and measuring 20 yards in circumference. It ingredients of the world that have existed from is a faithful copy of the capital before the Combeen actually recognised, and consists, in plain English, of highly electrified oxygen, the gas, which so electrified, acquiring specially good qualities in regard to the general health of mankind. Professor Montegazza, of Padua, states that certain plants and flowers, upon exposure to the rays of the sun, cause so large an increase in the quantity of ozone round about, as to be eminently conducive to a better condition of the atmosphere, of course with the understanding that there is proper voutilation, such as will carry off the excess of purely odorous matter that may arise from them. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as in season.

> For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chiness. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it erplains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally. It comprises upwards of two thousand large new Retablishment at the above address, where the good people of Dublin, and bearing this in mind, a swindler has endeavoured to im•	pose upon the unwary. Recently, on the eve of Punchestown Races, a summons server sallied forth from the Four Courts with a perfect bundle of jurors' summonses in his hands, demanding attendance on the following day. They were all perfect in form, and seemed to be the most regular of regular documents; but in the discharge of his self-imposed duty the server fell upon a Tartar.

	He came to the residence of a man who demurred, and complained of the inconvenience of having to abandon all his Punchestown •	arrangements. The server was sorry for the •-	trouble, and expressed his readiness "to _	wettle the matter." Our friend, however, at once recognized the device, and having avowed his readiness and determination to obey the summon of the court, the server became confused, and with alacrity, offered to withdraw the summons. Mr. L was determined to frustrate the impudent swindle. and insisted on keeping the summons. The next morning he received, through the post, an illiterate note, without official mark or indication, intimating that it was not necessary that he should attend to the summons which was served on him the previous day.
	The summons was a fabrication, and the •	object of the "official" of the court was to extract money from a number of gentlemen who were not willing to forego the attractions of Punchestown races for the tedium of a jury box.
